a financial times npr and bbc history best book of the year a bold and sweeping history of modern south asia told through the five partitions that reshaped it as recently as 1928 a vast swath of asia stretching from the red sea to the borders of thailand was bound together under a single imperial banner an entity known officially as the indian empire or more simply as the raj it was the british empire s crown jewel home to a quarter of the world s population in the span of just fifty years that empire shattered five partitions tore it apart carving it into twelve modern nations including not only india pakistan and bangladesh but also burma the united arab emirates and qatar in vivid and compulsively readable prose sam dalrymple presents for the first time the whole story of how the indian empire was unmade it s a story of maps being redrawn in boardrooms and on battlefields bumbling politicians in london and idealist revolutionaries in delhi kings in remote palaces and ordinary citizens swept up in wars and mass migrations it is a history of ambition and betrayal of forgotten wars and unlikely alliances of borders carved with ink and fire and it has left behind a legacy of exile and division it began in 1937 when burma was carved out of india to devastating result the partition of the arabian peninsula started the same year with the separation of aden and was completed in 1947 with the transfer of the gulf states also in 1947 was the great partition culminating in the largest forced migration in history and the creation of pakistan swiftly followed by the partition of princely india finally in 1971 the fledgling nation of pakistan was itself torn apart and bangladesh was born based on deep archival research previously untranslated sources and hundreds of interviews in english hindi urdu bengali punjabi konyak arabic and burmese shattered lands is an utterly gripping history that offers a new understanding of modern south asia one that brings to light the continuing legacy of empire

this book explores how shakespeare s original audience might have responded to his scenes of violence and in the process makes the case that fictional violence is valuable because it tells us about ourselves this book provides a philosophical assessment of the idea of personhood advanced in popular self help literature it also traces within academic philosophy and philosophical scholarship a self help culture where the self is brought forth as an object of improvement and a key to meaning progress and profundity unlike other academic treatments of the topic of self help this book is not primarily concerned with providing a critique of popular self help and self transformative practices rather it is concerned with how they work to shape contemporary forms and ideals of moral personhood and are conducive to moral renegotiation and change the book consists of two parts with somewhat different argumentative strategies part 1 consists of an overview and reassessment of popular self help literature and its sociological and journalistic critics written from a moral philosophical perspective part 2 opens with discussion of the current attraction among a range of philosophers to self transformative themes the chapters assess the strand of self transformative philosophy found in the work of ludwig wittgenstein michel foucault pierre hadot stanley cavell and iris murdoch finally the book concludes with a discussion of the theme of social change and moral renegotiation in contemporary societies which is a central but underestimated undercurrent in discussions on contemporary self transformative practices the book s dual perspective on both popular self help and self transformative currents in philosophy enables a cultural and moral philosophical analysis of contemporary ethical ideals of personhood as well as reflection on the literatures available for its development the making of the good person will be of interest to scholars and advanced students working in moral philosophy history of philosophy psychology sociology and literary studies the glass delusion when people believed they were made of glass explores a specific psychiatric disorder that plagued europe in the late middle ages and renaissance sufferers were convinced their bodies were made of glass and that any touch would cause them to shatter into pieces the most famous patient was king charles vi of france who wrapped himself in thick blankets and put iron rods in his clothes to prevent breaking medical historian charles shatter investigates the cultural roots of this delusion it appeared exactly when clear glass was becoming a new magical and fragile luxury item the mind latched onto this new material to express feelings of fragility and transparency the glass delusion is a fascinating study of how mental illness mirrors the technology of its time just as people today believe they are being tracked by microchips it is a poetic look at the human fear of being broken
